MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 10.

A ROMANTIC STORY.—A story is told by the paper recently started under the title of Touchstone; or the New Era, which professes to give an account of a journey undertaken by a "Jean de Deans" to Balmoral, by the mother of the convicts Staunton, for the purpose of making personal application to Her Majesty that the lives of her two sons might be spared. The poor woman, it is said, reached the Royal residence on Decade late at night, cold, weary, and sick at heart. On the Queen learning that she had come, "setting aside all etiquette and formality," she entered the apartment in which Mrs. Staunton was seated, and with a true Sovereign's and woman's heart listened to the appeal and humble prayer of one of her subjects in her deep distress. The poor petitioner prayed for mercy, and that the lives of her children might be spared. The Queen, no doubt with an aching heart, could only explain that she was entirely in the hands of her responsible Minister. The painful interview ended; the petitioner, grateful for the condescension and sympathy of her Sovereign, sought now to return to Balmoral, heartbroken that the last hope of saving her wretched sons had failed her. The "narrative" then goes on to say that Her Majesty sent Mrs. Staunton back to Balmoral in one of her own carriages, but scarcely had the vehicle left than the mails arrived, one of the bags containing a dispatch from the Home Secretary recommending a reprieve. "With the instinct of kindness and charitable feeling," the Queen at once instructed a special messenger to proceed on horseback and take the glad tidings to her sister in sorrow.
